

Angela's Update - Nov. 06

Published: Nov.25.2006 @ 4:30 pm

I printed the photos and most turned out well except the one with the stair case and exposed wiring. This will be great for people to see what needs to be done in terms of safety. Finish electric work. Jyoti has told me this is one of their next 2 or 3 priorities. The plastering is coming along well. Monalisa is looking great in yellow not sure which girl that is with her. That's Pinki and Anupa with Monalisa and maybe that's baboo in the glasses.

Great to read the updates and all your wonderful work Wendy. Its so amazing how this is all coming together. You are absolutely perfect for this job and were obviously hand picked by the blog angels to help create this exchange between our two cultures and help this cause. I know how the children's well being and education, from all countries around the world is such a vital part of who you are, and your big heart for the children really inspires me and all who you are working with. Thank you so much Wendy from all the children and all of us who are privileged to work along with you. You are such a vita link in our project. Love from all the children, Jyoti, Monalisa Pinki Anupa and Angela.

Please post the above paragrah onto the blog. Not sure how to yet but I will learn soon.

Well firstly we had a fantastic day at Devonport markets. I went with Toni who came along to help and talk to people. She knows lots of people there. Toni is having a morning tea to raise funds on the 6th Dec at her daughter inlaw's place. I will give a talk and show the Dichroics which are proving to be really popular for Christmas presents.

Kathy from the Barn remembers you and is going to sell movie tickets for us in her shop and bought one of the pendants I made last week plus I sold another one of mine too. Alister said, "Well of course, cos they are just as good as Nick's." I didnt believe it at first, but now I do. I will have to order some more today for the Devonport show next week. People were so supportive of what we are doing. Tassie people and the poorer ones are all so giving.
